

Risk Disclosure Statement

Trading in financial markets, including social trading, involves significant risk of loss and is not suitable for all investors. Before engaging in social trading, you should carefully consider your investment objectives, level of experience, and risk appetite.

Risk of Loss: Trading in financial markets carries a high level of risk and may not be suitable for all investors. The possibility exists that you could sustain a loss of some or all of your initial investment and therefore you should not invest money that you cannot afford to lose.

Market Volatility: The financial markets can be highly volatile, with prices fluctuating rapidly in response to a variety of factors. This volatility can lead to significant price swings and may result in losses.

Leverage: Trading on margin or leverage can amplify both profits and losses. While leverage can increase the potential for profit, it also increases the risk of significant losses, especially when the market moves against your position.

Counterparty Risk: When engaging in social trading, you are relying on the expertise and performance of other traders. There is a risk that these traders may make poor trading decisions or be subject to market conditions that result in losses.

Technological Risks: Trading platforms and technology can fail, resulting in disruptions to trading or loss of data. It is important to have contingency plans in place to mitigate these risks.

Regulatory Risks: Financial markets are subject to regulatory oversight, which can impact trading activities. Changes in regulations or regulatory actions can affect the value of your investments.

Past Performance: Past performance is not indicative of future results. Just because a trader has performed well in the past does not guarantee that they will continue to do so in the future.

Before engaging in social trading, you should carefully consider your investment objectives, level of experience, and risk appetite. You should also seek independent financial advice if you have any doubts about the suitability of social trading for you.

By using our social trading platform, you acknowledge that you have read, understood, and agree to be bound by the terms of this risk disclosure statement.